

This week, I got in contact with my client, Andrew Tennant. He gave me the site plan for his website, and I created an HTML and CSS file for it. I was able to add a bit of code, including headers, images, and paragraphs of text.

As a client, I present Jacob Barney with my site plan for him to work on, and I plan on following up with him next week as to his progress.

I was also able to join the GitHub repositories for each of the projects in which I will be a junior developer. My lead developers are Andrew Tennant and Logan Welch.

All in all, for this first week, I got the GitHub set up for each project, and have started the code for the project in which I'm the lead developer. My junior developers, Jason Madsen and David Bolivar, have been invited to the repository